It was very interesting visit in a secondary school that give me the opportunity to live, and not only read on a book of theory of management, the importance of a good LEADERSHIP. I see whit my eyes, and I breath myself the good atmosphere of emphatic relationships that the Headmaster builds whit all people who work in the school day by day; I've felt that the school, is really the school of all; A school in which, teachers, headmaster, student, attendants and parents; work exclusively on the interest of the goal of the student.

Today I've touched with my hands the importance to practice what you are learning and study. During my visit I make attention to didactic methodology of all teacher and I find it focused on the motivation of the students through the practice of "learning by doing"; all student was very motivated and interested in practice their task. Another important element of today is the care taken in all learning spaces; I find it structured to motivate student and teacher, all areas are very well organized to motivate and make happy to learn and teach.

Like in Italy the educational system is supported by two different kinds of schools Private and public schools. Today I've learned more about private schools, I've found its organization not very flexible like a public schools and a little elitist school. Teachers use all similar didactic methodology (traditional methodology) and the students come from middle-high class social families. Good school but different approach to didactic.
